Listeriosis in an infant receiving transfusions and treated with granulocyte transfusions. A 2 1/2-month-old infant received packed red blood cells, plasma, and platelets from multiple donors while in the hospital because of fever and lack of response to initial treatment. The infant had recurrent bacteremia due to Listeria monocytogenes, which was isolated from a blood culture on the 14th day after the infant's admission. Granulocyte transfusions were given after the patient received transfusions from two other blood donors. During the 18-day hospitalization, the infant was treated with penicillin. Despite a prolonged hospitalization, the patient did not develop Listeria meningitis.I'll never forget that delicious steak!" "He was at my place." "Did he cook it for you?" "No, I had it at the hotel." "You're kidding." "Where?" "At your hotel." "At your hotel." "Why did you leave?" "I'm sorry 82157476af
